

Non-Objective is another great option if you don't have any idea what to draw. This style of art is different from abstraction in the sense that it doesn't have to have any ground in reality. Here, you don't have to have any intention of portraying real life objects. Non-Objective art is typically a way to express the emotion of something or someone through the use of shapes and colors. Many claim that non-objective art is a way to convey simplicity and purity without the need to explicitly define the meaning with words.

Instructions

1. Start with a 3.5" x 3.5" piece of paper, a pencil, and a black pen.
2. Try to show something that can't be seen, possibly a sound or a feeling. You can represent this through basic art principles (rhythm, movement, etc) and elements (shapes, color, etc).
3. Play around with the positioning of the shapes to convey a sense of movement or distortion. You might want to do a few iterations to try to get a form that works for you.
4. Non-Objective art doesn't have to be complex visually, you can take this opportunity to focus on visual balance of relatively simple forms.
5. Once you get a form that you are happy with, outline it with your black pen (or any other color you may wish to use) so it will be easier to scan in the next assignment. Try to avoid any color fills or shading as they cannot be applied in the future assignments.
6. Proceed to M1A2
